

ASID AxD COUNCIL APPLICATION

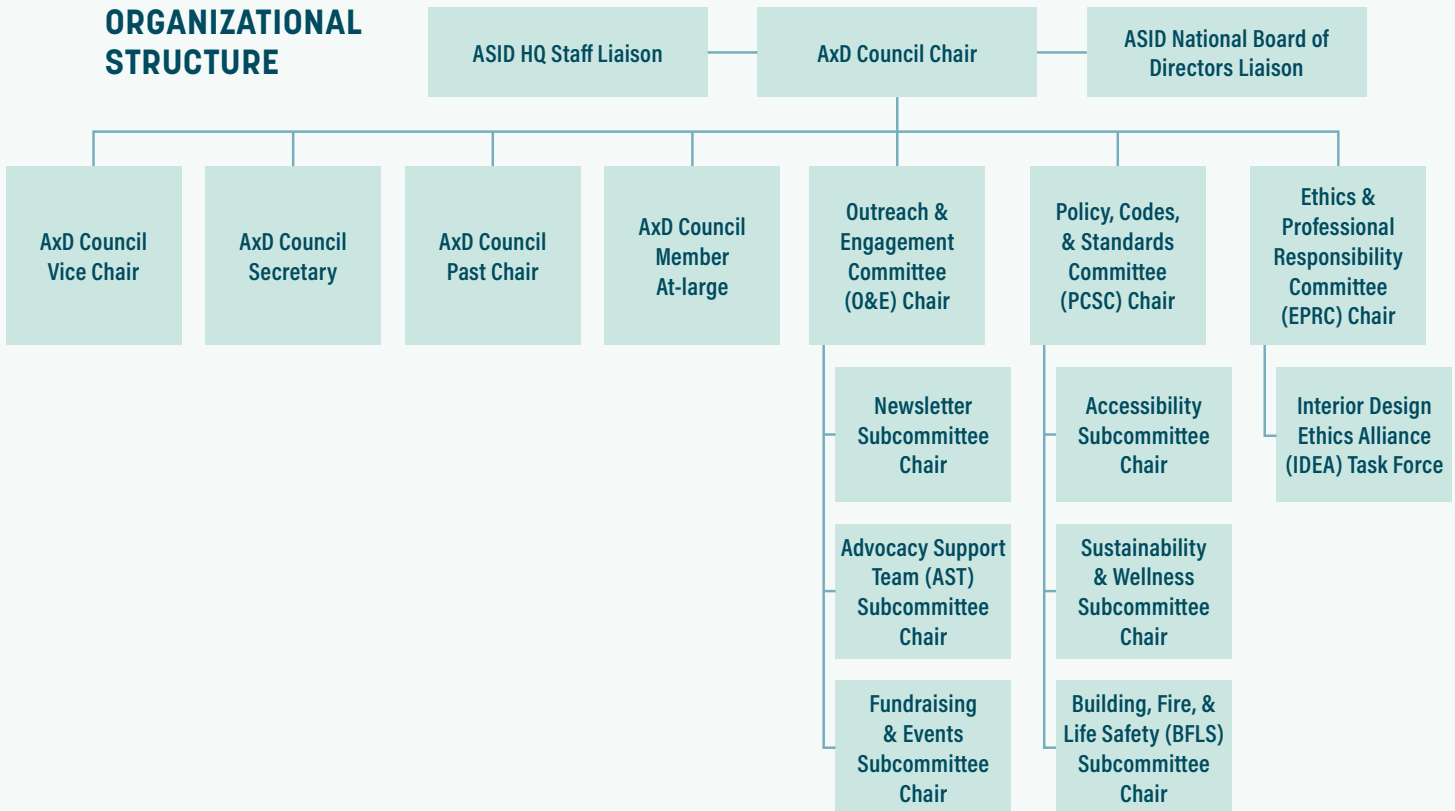

INTRODUCTION

The ASID Advocate by Design (AxD) Council advocates for and educates on the impact of interior design within the built environment by interior designers that safeguard the life, health, safety, welfare, and well-being of building occupants and the public. The AxD Council monitors, researches, and engages in the development of codes, standards, and professional practices, plus supports ASID’s efforts to advance legislative, regulatory, and public policies that protect and benefit the interior design profession.

COMPOSITION

The AxD Council is comprised of volunteer members who coordinate with ASID HQ and support the goals of the National Board of Directors. The AxD Council is made up of an Executive Committee and three (3) Committees with six (6) total Subcommittees that cover subject matters relevant to ASID members and stakeholders, the interior design profession, and the built environment at large. Through their work, these Committees and Subcommittees educate members and the public about thoughtful design by qualified practitioners and how that can positively impact the lives of building occupants and the general public.
